

July 1, 2020

Dear Investor:

SkyBridge Multi-Adviser Hedge Fund Portfolios LLC - Series G ("Series G") generated an estimated 3.49% net return in June and an estimated 6.49% net return for the second quarter. These returns represent the Fund's best month since September 2010 and best quarter since Q3 2012.

Further, SkyBridge raised approximately $115 million in new capital in the second quarter, inclusive of a $93 million separate account mandate from a large Japanese institution. While we have had ongoing discussions with this large institution for over a year, the institution moved quickly, which is uncommon for Japanese firms, to take advantage of the very attractive investment opportunity produced by March's sharp, technically driven sell-off.

The $115 million in new capital represents SkyBridge's most successful capital raising quarter since 2016. After the March drawdown and given improving economic fundamentals, our new investors believe, as we do, that the Fund's assets are substantially undervalued.

Portfolio Construction

We take a highly concentrated, thematic approach to asset allocation, and we retained a substantial allocation to our highest conviction theme: credit strategies. On July 1st, Series G's allocation to credit strategies is 74% (61% in structured credit, 11% in distressed corporate credit, and another 2% in structured credit via Third Point).

As a point of reference, on March 1st, Series G's allocation to credit strategies was 81%. By any measure, our portfolio changes are quite modest, even minor. We are not aware of another fund-of-funds with as large an allocation to credit strategies.

We re-allocated 9% of the capital to Point72, Bridgewater, and Renaissance (RIEF). These managers generated strong returns after previous market dislocations, and thus, the allocation to these three managers represents a "recovery" theme. Moreover, Point72 and Bridgewater were previously closed funds. We leveraged our relationships to obtain capacity for our investors. These new top managers, along with our incumbent managers, are, we believe, best positioned to take advantage of dislocations in the market and to recoup our March losses over the coming quarters.

Investment Process and Personnel

There have been no changes to our investment process or due diligence procedures. Troy Gayeski and Ray Nolte have been running the portfolio together since 2005, and they continue to run the portfolio as Co-Chief Investment Officers. This represents tremendous continuity. Series G declined 24.7% in March, and, as a result, changes were made to our team. There is accountability in a results-oriented business like SkyBridge.

The talent level on the investment team was substantially upgraded in April when Brett Messing, SkyBridge President and Chief Operating Officer, took responsibility for managing the Risk and Operational Due Diligence teams. Risk management represents the most important function in the firm. Notably, as part of the aforementioned $93 million separate account, SkyBridge will also be providing risk analysis on a $10 billion portfolio for a Japanese institution.

We recommend that investors, financial advisors, and due diligence professionals get to know Brett. He can be reached on his cell phone at (310) 633-0770.

Secondary Market Sales

We would like to provide further context regarding our secondary market sales of EJV and Hildene which continue to be a topic of discussion. On April 1st, 27% of Series G's assets were invested in funds, like EJV and Hildene, that suspended redemptions. Anticipating forthcoming redemptions given March's performance, absent taking action, EJV and Hildene would have likely grown to represent over 30% of Series G's assets.

We could not allow this level of concentration in the portfolio, particularly as EJV and Hildene are primarily invested in a niche market, bank TruPS CDOs. We were concerned about the trading dynamics in the TruPS CDO market, and, in fact, these assets have substantially underperformed since March 31st. Further, smaller banks are very exposed to lending losses from the economic damage wrought by the pandemic, and thus we expect a deterioration in underlying fundamentals of these assets.

Moreover, had we not taken action, investors, financial advisors, and due diligence professionals would have rightly expressed concerns about Series G's ability to satisfy 25% tender offers and the overconcentration in our portfolio. Thus, we were in a lose-lose position, and we made a difficult decision based on the best interests of our investors.

Presently, 4% of Series G assets are invested in funds with suspended redemptions. Moreover, recent investments in more liquid funds like Bridgewater, Renaissance, and Point72 enhanced Series G's overall liquidity. Despite criticism of the EJV and Hildene trades, we would make the same trades one hundred out of one hundred times.

Tender Offer

We do not expect a tender offer of 25%. However, Troy and Ray structured Series G's portfolio to ensure that the Fund could satisfy a 25% tender and maintain portfolio continuity. We are 15% through the tender period (three business days out of the twenty-business day tender period), and we have received $27,599,035 (or less than one percent of Fund assets) in tenders. Admittedly, we do not receive tenders linearly throughout tender offer windows, and we expect elevated tenders this quarter.

We believe that most investors and financial advisors recognize that, after our best month and best quarter since 2012, this is precisely the wrong time to redeem from the Fund. We assess that Series G's assets are over 20% undervalued, and it appears the "catch-up" trade that we anticipated is underway. Further, we believe that the Fund is likely to substantially outperform equities over the coming six to twelve months. We understand that, for some, our March performance was a fire-able offense. We accept that. But, firing us now is the wrong decision.

Change to Tender Offer Policy

On June 25, 2020, the Series G Board authorized a 25% tender offer for September 30. SkyBridge recommended that future tender offers adopt the same liquidity terms as our primary competitor, Ironwood. Thus, in the future SkyBridge will recommend that the Board authorize semi-annual tender offers for valuation dates of March 31 and September 30. Under this schedule, the next tender offer window, after the current one, would open on or about November 25, 2020.

Semi-annual tenders will enable SkyBridge to de-emphasize liquidity terms in the selection of managers and broaden the universe of managers eligible for inclusion in the portfolio. Not surprisingly, many of the top managers offer less liquid terms. Thus, quarterly tenders arguably produce a bit of an adverse selection problem. We believe that, over the long term, semi-annual tender offers will result in better performance for Series G's investors. Importantly, as most investors do not day trade Series G, holding two tender offers every year, instead of four, represents an immaterial change.

Closing Remarks

As usual, the credit markets have lagged the U.S. stock market which just posted its strongest quarter since 1998. Given the substantial value in credit, particularly structured credit, several investment firms, including Morgan Stanley and Merrill Lynch, have issued bullish reports on structured credit (generally) and structured credit managers (specifically).

Series G represents a particularly cost-effective way to play the credit "catch-up" trade that we believe is currently underway. Series G offers exposure to a diversified basket of the top credit managers for a current 1.3% management fee and 3% incentive fee. Whereas new investors in Angelo Gordon Mortgage Value, Series G's second largest position, will pay incentive fees, Series G investors pay no incentives fees for this exposure (until Angelo Gordon returns to its high-water mark).

Series G's portfolio is presently yielding 8.05%. While the allocations to Point72, Third Point, Canyon, and Bridgewater marginally reduced the portfolio's overall yield, we believe pull to par will be a substantial factor in the Fund's total return.

In summary, market bottoms are made when there is capitulation. We believe that a sale of Series G will prove to be ill-advised and poorly timed. We encourage investors to carefully consider the embedded value in Series G's portfolio and the Fund's last three months of performance. Series G was up 0.63% in April, 2.26% in May and estimated 3.49% in June. We believe that we will carry this momentum into the coming months and quarters.

Sincerely,

Anthony Scaramucci

Ray Nolte

Troy Gayeski
